REPUBLICAN TICKET.

FOR DELEGATE IN CONGRESS
HON. TRANQUILINO LUNA OF VALLENCIA COUNTY.

WHAT DOES ALL THIS MEAN?
A day or two after the Republican convention, The Journal took occasion to point with pride to the enthusiasm with which the nomination of Mr. Luna was received by the people of the Territory, especially in the mining camps, and now comes our senior evening contemporary—which we are pleased to see, does not bolt the ticket—and pronounces our remarks on this subject "sarcastic," "irony," and all that, and says we are "politically wicked in this matter." What does the Review mean by such questionable observations? Does it intend to insinuate that the nomination of Mr. Luna was not received with great enthusiasm by the people of the Territory? If that is not the impression it means to convey, then why does it pronounce our affirmation of the fact "sarcastic" and "irony"? That's a questionable kind of support for an alleged Republican paper to give the nominee of its party, and if the Review intends to go through the campaign with a bundle of wet blankets like that, under its arm, ready to dampen every indication of budding enthusiasm among the Republican voters of the Territory, the sooner it ceases its pretence of Republicanism the better it will be for the party. We have nothing to fear from the open enemy; inspired by the name of Luna, emboldened upon our banners, the Republican masses of New Mexico will march forward next November, to a glorious victory over the cohorts of Democracy. But we can't afford to have any enemies in our own camp; we can't afford to have any man or any newspaper hanging on to the edge of the party, ready to hold on or let go at a moment's notice, and meantime stabbing Mr. Luna in the back by characterizing reports of Republican enthusiasm as "sarcastic" and "irony." We can't afford to have any such conduct, and moreover, we shall not permit it. The Review remained astride of the political fence all the time before the convention, making mouths at both sides, but now that the ticket is made it must take its medicine—it must get off the fence either into the party or out of the party—it must fish or cut bait, and must march to the music of Luna in a straightforward, undisturbed manner, or be drummed out of the ranks.

A WOLF IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING.
There are threats being now made of bolting the Republican ticket, but those who supported Judge Prince before the convention and refuse to support Luna after it, will find out that it will cost them something—Review.

We are sorry to see our neighbor persisting in his efforts to injure the Republican ticket. If he cannot consistently support the Republican nominee, let him go over to the other side like a man, and make his light openly. This would be much more honorable than his present course of pretending to support the ticket, while all the time doing everything he can to injure the cause. There are no threats of bolting; there have been no threats of bolting; and nobody knows this better than the Review man. Then why does it keep up this chatter every day about bolts and traitors? Simply to encourage and assist the Democrats by creating the impression that there is great disaffection in the Republican ranks. The party never was more harmonious; never more united, never more enthusiastic. There is not the slightest evidence of discord or division in any part of the Territory, and the ticket is everywhere received with marked enthusiasm. All the bad blood in the convention died away with adjournment. Two Prince men have made a hard fight, but Mr. Prince moved to make the nomination of his successful rival unanimous, and all his supporters voted for it. Judge Cartmell was indignant at being denied his seat, and Col. Chavez was terribly frightened lest the twenty-one Prince men should somehow get away with the fifty-one and a half Luna men, but the judges got over his indignation and the colonel recovered from his fright, while the able and eloquent address of Mr. Luna before the convention marked him as a brilliant young man of fine abilities and great promise, and one that every citizen of New Mexico can be proud to recognize as our representative at Washington. In view of all these facts, the talk of the Review about bolts and traitors is "politically wicked"—it is a covert attack upon Mr. Luna, which does him far more injury than an open assault.

AN IMPORTANT WORK.
But a small portion of the lands adjacent to the Atlantic & Pacific railroad west of Albuquerque have been surveyed and the company and settlers are put to great inconvenience in consequence of this culpable neglect of the general government. There is no reason why this Territory should not be surveyed at once, so that its lands can be placed in the market, and disposed of to actual settlers. The subject ought to be agitated until the work is done. —St. Louis Railway Register.

So far as the railroad is concerned, it makes comparatively little difference whether these lands are surveyed or not; it can afford to wait, and the longer the lands are held back the more they will be worth; but the negligence of the government in this matter works great injustice and hardship to the people who are seeking homes in the west. The lands referred to lie in the best unoccupied portion of the public domain; they are the finest and most desirable lands that the government now has at its disposal, and thousands of people would like to make homes for themselves along the line of the Atlantic & Pacific road if the country were surveyed, so that a man could know whether he was settling upon railroad or government land. No other section of the public land now offers such attraction to settlers—in the matters of soil, climate and market—as the district contiguous to the Atlantic & Pacific road, in New Mexico and Arizona, and every acre of it, for at least twenty-five miles on either side, ought to be surveyed, and open to settlement. The course of the government in this matter is very justly characterized by The Register as "culpable negligence."

NEAREST OFFICE IN THE TERRITORY.
The Albuquerque Journal has perhaps the nearest office in the Territory, but The Optic will go there two better when it gets into its new quarters. —Las Vegas Optic.

A Captivating Cleveland Girl.
Speaking of prices, you know there has been a sort of royal international flitting match—or what perhaps ought to be a match, if it could be—going on at Hamburg. The Prince of Wales was always partial to American girls; there is something so free an untrammelled about American young ladies, especially when abroad, particularly when abroad in the society of princes. And this past month Miss Chamberlain, of Cleveland, it is said, has completely captivated Victoria's oldest son, who still sows his wild oats whenever he has a good chance, and the present was an unusually good one. A Boston girl or a New York girl, or even a Philadelphia girl, is usually nervous and very conscious when with the Prince of Wales, but let the latter appear to be gracious to a Cleveland girl and if there is not some questionable mutual devotion it will not be Miss Chamberlain's fault or the prince's either. Gossip says he has been premeditating with her every day and she often dines with him at Kurhaus, though he is a married man with children. It is all right, of course; other people do it, and why should not princes and young ladies from Cleveland?

The Cincinnati Enquirer makes the following pleasant reference to the proprietor of its rival, the Commercial: "There is no doubt but that Murat Halstead is the vainest old jackdaw that ever strutted in stolen plumage. Persons who know say there is not a photograph gallery in Cincinnati that Halstead has not visited at some time and left his beautiful shadow. He is found in every pose possible to conceive, his ambition being apparently to find the position that would display his fine points to the best advantage. Some are full length pictures, and some bust pictures. Some of them represent him with his head bent forward as if in deep meditation, and others represent him with his head turned backward as if to receive the divine light which as yet has not fallen upon him. Probably two-thirds of his pictures show him seated at a table, pen in hand, as if indicating an article for the press. In these pictures his brow is averted and his general attitude simply awe-inspiring. In some of them he has the index finger of his left hand pressed upon his temple, as if to hold in check the throbbing intellect within."

A Call by the Syndicate.
The Seilinger syndicate has issued a call for $990,000 of Atlantic & Pacific bonds. Of the second subscription of $6,000,000 the first 30 per cent. was paid by subscribers $1,980,000; 40 per cent. paid by syndicate, $2,640,000; 30 per cent. still due, $1,980,000. The truck is now completed within 175 miles of the Colorado river. The extension from Major east was completed, forty-seven and one-half miles, last month, or to within 198 miles of the Colorado river, where the rails will be joined in April next.—St. Louis Railway Register.

The Chinese.
A lady in Hartford, Connecticut, has recently received letters from two young Chinese men who were formerly students in that city. They say the anti-Chinese law has weakened China's confidence in this country so greatly that no more boys will be sent here for education. Those who have already received a training in our schools are being put into government positions, displacing foreigners who were receiving very high salaries. Gen. Gordon gets what is equivalent to $100,000 as an instructor and practical head of the army.

A Grand Success.
The Territorial Exposition held at Albuquerque this week has been a grand success, demonstrating to the hundreds of visitors to the Territory that New Mexico is rich, not only in her wealth of minerals and flocks and herds, but that great things may be expected of her as an agricultural country. The display of fruits, cereals, and vegetables, the production of which is, of course, at present restricted to a comparatively insignificant portion of our whole area, yet shows what grand results may be attained.—Raton News and Press.

George Francis.
George Francis Train has taken a vow that he will never talk again to an adult human being. He has kept his word for quite a while, but as the police have ordered him to quit loafing in Madison square, where he sits all day with a crowd of children around him, the newspapers are afraid he will begin talking again.

Justice as administered in the petty courts of England is rigorous, if the offender is poor and friendless. Two reputable laborers stole a handful each of oats from a field to feed their hungry donkey, and a magistrate sent them to prison two months.

OSCAR IN WALL STREET.

The Sensation Which the Esthete Created Among the Bulls and Bears.

From the New York Times, Sept. 20.
Mr. H. K. Burras is one of the best known stock brokers in Wall street, but within a short half hour yesterday he attracted more attention and won more glory than in all the past years of his life. To Mr. Burras was accorded the honor of introducing Oscar Wilde to the aesthetic shades of Wall street. It was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon when he brought his charming charge down town. Oscar looked his sweetest. Finest black broadcloth wrapped a form pleasantly suggestive of corsets, and a tall, shiny stovepipe sat with an exquisite grace just above a delicate ear. The flowing tresses of the philosopher were fresh from the oil jar, and rainbow stockings tucked into dapper knee-breeches were the only drawbacks to the pretty picture as Oscar himself most delights to show it. To say that Oscar's appearance in Wall street created a sensation is scarcely to do the great man justice. Business came suddenly to a standstill. A brass band at a country fair never wrought more startling effects. About a dozen boys are employed in Wall street. Each and every one of the thousand forgot the urgent errands upon which they had been sent into the street on the fly. They crowded close around the esthete, and did him honor after a fashion which brought to his horrors to his sensitive nature and affecting blushes to his cleanly cheek.

Mr. Burras began to grow unhappy, and rushed his philosophic friend into the stock exchange. The hoodlums followed. Exchange rules decreed for nothing, and the very had little boys made the hallways and galleries of the exchange ring with their enthusiasm. The brokers caught sight of Burras, and his companion was recognized. Then there arose a shout which the cries and howlings of the messenger boys were but as pleasing murmurs. Mr. Wilde remarked to Mr. Burras that he was quite ready to move along. He had seen enough, and more than enough. The crowds grew bigger and the cries grew louder. A hundred brokers stood at the foot of the main stairway, ready for a concerted rush whereby to get Oscar upon the floor. In the excitement, if not policy, program had been arranged. The philosopher was to be hazed after the most approved Stock Exchange style, and the bulls and bears were gloating over the prospect of soon sending their visitor forth to the world, hatless, coatless, and in a generally dilapidated condition. But Burras discovered the scheme. From experience he well knew what was on hand, and quickly making a bank movement, he hurried his shapely charge down a back stairway. Secretary White and Assistant Secretary Burnham ventured into the hall, attracted by the hubbub, and Oscar tumbled headlong into both officers, more to their astonishment, however, than to their bodily hurt. He was quite as anxious as was Burras to make a hasty retreat. Out through a side room into Broad street the fugitive shot. The brokers were sadly disappointed, so were the messenger boys. Broker Burras hastily hired a cab, and Oscar was whirled over the cobblestones of a side street up-town.

PEOPLE AND THINGS.
There will be two weddings in the Ludlam family in October. Indian canoes and light gondolas are popular on the Thames. Ex-Secretary Dorsey has leased a Washington house for one year. A Boston school girl describes a statue as a bust with two legs under it. Electricity displaces oil in forty-two lighthouses on the French coast. America is being badly beaten by England in everything but pretty girls. The cultured no longer call it hash. Mosaic nutriment is the correct form. The President will soon start on a ten days' trip to Maine and New Hampshire. A farmer at Valdosta, Ga., has made two crops of corn on one piece of land. Irish laborers on farms in England are being frequently mobbed by Englishmen. General Sherman receives on an average 1,200 invitations a year to reunions and similar gatherings. Moses Williams, who died in Boston last week, leaving a fortune of $6,000,000, began life peddling milk in the streets of that city. Hod Bey, a Turk of former official prominence, is greatly venerated in Constantinople on account of his age, which is believed to be 120 years. A boy in Trenton, fourteen years old, was sent a poll tax bill, and, feeling that the assessor had made a man of him, decided to act like one, and proudly paid it. Special inducements to plant trees are offered in Dakota, where for every five acres of trees, forty acres of land with $1,000 in improvements are exempted from taxation. The Prince of Wales has given a family of noble guinea pigs to the London Zoological Gardens, and the Comte de Paris has presented that resort with four magnificent wild boars. For a sick man, Herbert Spencer uses good, healthy, oranges. Of Oscar Wilde he is quoted as saying: "He is that outlandish person who attempted to reconcile idiosyncrasy with art, and nanby pamboyism with sentiment."

An Alpine guide, with a pack on his back, leaned against a rail that ran along the edge of a precipice, and was warning his party of tourists of the necessity of keeping a sure footing, when the barrier broke and he was killed by the fall. Passengers on the Midland railroad, in England, fell into the habit of flinging their empty bottles out of the car windows. After several persons had been hit the company put up placards requesting travelers to be more considerate. The refusal of the Archbishop of Paris to allow the body of a man killed in a duel to be taken into any Roman Catholic church, or to let the priest conduct the funeral rites, was regarded in Paris as an important religious blow at dueling. Up at Tallula Falls last week was Mrs. Spriggins, from the country. She had her little child with her, which could toddle about and was venturesome, and caused her great anxiety in the absence of Spriggins. She remarked to a friend: "I wouldn't have that child fall over the precipice and get killed for anything, because I would never hear the last of it from Spriggins."

Old Goodman went to some English opera while he was in Chicago, of the Alice Oates variety. He came home a very wrathful man. "Don't talk to me any more about giving" was the motto, he roared. "If ever I catch a wife or daughter of mine dancing in a necktie and a pair of slippers somebody'll have to read the riot act before the lot is half over, I don't care who tries to stop me."

What will the young swell do this winter for something out in dress by which he may be distinguished from the common herd? The "oi polloi" lost the winter, the tight trousers, the Jumbo hat, the book cane, the pointed shoe, the hair brushed forward in front of the ear. These well characteristics have been inherited by the people. Indeed, it is difficult now to tell a swell from a dry goods clerk on the street. We suppose the former will have to watch and pray for something new—knickerbockers, for instance.

DRAW POKER.
Mr. Matthews' Claim That He parted with $35,000 at that Game in Paris.

Charles H. Crawford brought suit in the supreme court against Charles A. Matthews about two months ago to recover $4,000 which he claimed to have lent the defendant in Paris in March, 1881. An attachment was granted against the property of the defendant upon the ground of his non-residence. A motion was made before Judge Haight last month to vacate the attachment upon the ground that the amount sought to be recovered was a gambling debt. Judge Haight denied the motion, with leave to renew it upon additional affidavits.

The motion was made the second time before Judge Lawrence. Mr. Matthews, in his affidavit, said he became acquainted with Crawford on the steamship Germania on her voyage from New York to Liverpool in November, 1880. They played poker in the smoking-room, and gradually enlarged the limit of the game until the pursuer interfered, saying it was against the rules to play for so high stakes. The players were Crawford, Reginald C. Leven, and a Mr. Seydick. Afterwards Matthews says he and Crawford and Leven in London and Paris, and in February in the latter city, he lost at poker $35,000, of which Leven won $13,000, a man named Harrison $6,000, and Crawford the rest.

Edward McPhillips, a detective, made affidavit that he had been informed by well-known sporting men, including John Geary, Morris Simmons, and D. H. Oakes, that Crawford was known as a professional gambler and engaged in no other business; that it was his practice to go to Europe once or twice every year for the purpose of making the acquaintance of persons on the voyage and of engaging them in playing cards either on shipboard or in England or on the Continent and winning their money; that he was one of the smartest men in the world in manipulating cards while dealing, and that he had won $40,000 at one sitting with a pack of cards.

John H. Stoker made affidavit that Crawford and Leven were professional gamblers, and that he had been informed by one of them that they and William Edwards had agreed to go to Europe for the purpose of making the acquaintance of persons on the voyage and of engaging them in playing cards either on shipboard or in England or on the Continent and winning their money; that he was one of the smartest men in the world in manipulating cards while dealing, and that he had won $40,000 at one sitting with a pack of cards.

Crawford and Leven made affidavits denying these statements, and reiterating that the money claimed was lent in Paris upon an agreement by Matthews that he would refund it upon realizing on the sale of United States bonds in London. They deny that they won money from Matthews either on the steamship or afterwards, though they admit having played poker with him, and they assert that he was an inveterate gambler, and that he had won and lost fortunes at Monte Carlo.

Judge Lawrence denied the motion to set aside the attachment, saying that, although the case was amplified by the affidavits read on the present motion, he did not see that the main features of the case were different from those which were passed upon by Judge Haight.

Some Heavy Wagers.
Hightoned horse circles in New York City are very much exercised at present in regard to the superiority of Mr. Vanderbilt's or Mr. Work's team. The latter, Dick Swiveler and Edward, will be remembered some little time ago trotted a mile in 2:10. This was considered an extraordinary performance, being several seconds below the best double team time recorded. This performance, however, was beaten very recently by Mr. Vanderbilt's team Aldine and Early Rose, which trotted a mile over the Hartford track in 2:03. Mr. Work and his friends have rather intimated that the latter time was never made, and Mr. Work has offered to trot his horses for a fabulous amount against Mr. Vanderbilt's team. In answer to Mr. Vanderbilt's challenge Mr. T. C. Eastman, an admirer of Mr. Vanderbilt's clipper, having obtained consent, lays the following wager through the columns of The Herald: "I will bet that the pure Aldine will beat either of Mr. Work's horses; $10,000 that Early Rose will beat the other, and $10,000 that the pair will beat Swiveler and Edward; the races all to be three in five, and to come off on the Hartford track. The first race to come off on Monday of next week; the second on Wednesday, and the third on Saturday; all the bets to be taken in none."
